

Unit Planning Exercise

Curriculum Inquiry for Social Studies – B
Prof. Dr. Marie Farrell
University of Calgary

There is no question that the Law is interwoven throughout Social Studies, however little emphasis is placed on how even an elementary understanding of the law can enrich our understanding of the subject. As an advocate for an increased societal understanding of the Law, and as a graduate of the Law and Society program from the University of Calgary, I felt compelled to focus on the Law for my Unit Planning Exercise. Being a module based course, Legal Studies 10 has presented a unique challenge in organizing and scheduling classes, activities, lesson plans, and supplementary materials to enrich learning. However, compared to Legal Studies 20 and 30, which have 5 and 8 modules respectively, Legal Studies 10 can be scheduled in a similar fashion to a non-module course. If I had chosen to compose a unit plan for Legal Studies 20 or 30, my approach would have had to be different.

Attached to this document is a calendar I created to outline a 6 week plan for teaching module 1 of Legal Studies 10 (LGS1010: Private Law). Each week focuses on one or more of the specific and general outcomes for LGS1010, and has been scheduled as I believe will allow for the necessary amount of time for students to engage with the material in a meaningful, relevant, and inquiry based way. Also included in this document are week by week breakdowns of the general topics which will be covered, some suggested supplementary readings, and resources that would be made available to students if in fact I end up teaching Legal Studies 10 in my teaching career. I am hoping this will be likely, since I have both a personal interest in the Law and a formal educational background to support that interest.

Lesson plans, handouts, online resources, questions, etc. are available for two of the days I have scheduled (bordered with red dashes on the calendar) but are located as separate files, within the USB – appropriately and clearly titled as to indicate which day they correspond with.

Week 1 begins with the first of 3 modules in the Legal Studies 10 curriculum (LGS 1010 – Private Law). Day one is scheduled to include an introduction of the course material, course outline, class expectation, as well as an overview of assignments, quizzes, and unit finals for the duration of the course. Following will be an “ice-breaker” activity to familiarize myself with the students, and them with me. Finally, a classroom activity will take place – following a class discussion with the guiding question of “What is the Law?” – In which the class with essentially formulate law to govern the goings on of the class, daily routine, punishments, etc. Day 2 – 4 will focus on the first general outcome of the LGS1010 module POS: Explain the Explain the nature and function of law with specific attention given to fulfilling specific objective 1.1: Explain the principles of the rule of law. Week 1 will culminate with an overview of the week’s activities and lessons, and will set the stage for regular review and open dialogue throughout the course.

Week 2 will begin with a Prezi and Lecture on Jurisprudence titled Legal Theory and the Philosophy of Law in which students will receive a foundation of knowledge necessary to build upon throughout the course***. Day 6 and 7 will focus on fulfilling objectives 1.2.1 and 1.2.2 – understanding the differences between substantive law and procedural law and between public law and private law. This will be accomplished, like many other objectives, through the use of overhead / smart board notes, YouTube clips where and when available, open forum and or guided class discussion, and through selected additional, recommended, or required readings from my personal collection of legal texts from my undergraduate degree. Day 6 will focus on objectives 1.3.1 – 1.3.4 centering on identifying the sources of Canadian Law. Day 6 will also include a review of all prior content and course material in preparation for a quiz to take place on Day 9, which will cover all material up to and including Day 8. Students will be introduced to the concept of building an effective study guide, which they will have the ability to use throughout most quizzes and finals during the semester. *** Lesson Plan, Class Notes, and a link to the online Prezi located on USB ***

Following Quiz 1 on the previous Friday, Day 10 of LGS1010 and the beginning of week 3 will start with an overview of quiz 1 and introduce general object 2: Identify how private relationships are governed in a simplistic way, defining what a private relationship is and what a public relationship is. Day 11 will review private and public relationships, and introduce Contracts and Agreements: specific outcome 2.2 which will serve as the educational underpinning for the remainder of the week. A class discussion on "social contracts" will take place. Day 12 builds on the concepts introduced on the previous day, and fulfills specific outcome 2.3 by elaborating on the legal requirements for a contract (offer, consideration, acceptance, and intention to establish legal relations) as well as methods of entering and exiting contracts, breach of contract, and oral vs. written contracts. Day 13 will carry forward the study of contracts by way of a class activity where students will have been asked to bring in as many contracts as they can find, where we will discuss them as a class, and draw out our knowledge from the week's lessons. Week 3 finishes with the movie, The Social Network which will be used to further enrich the growing conception of the complexity of contract law, and will also expose students to other elements of business law*.
